

- 12 -

ABSTRACT

A BRACKET

This invention relates to components joined together using structural joints and more particularly to brackets used for securing components together
5 in such joints, the brackets being made from a single cut out shape from a sheet of composite material, having at least one fold line defining first and second regions of the bracket, about which the material has been bent to form a three-dimensional shape and a method for making such a bracket.